

APPLICATION SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

Procedures and Timeline

Before completing the application, please review the criteria for Eligibility and Selection for NextGen 2019. The completed application submission consists of the following:

2. Your current résumé (three pages maximum).
3. Your Biography (no more than 300 words).
4. A headshot photo of yourself (JPEG 250x250 pixels).
5. Your institution's mission statement.
6. Your institution's organizational chart with your position circled or highlighted.
7. Two required letters of recommendation.

All materials, including letters of recommendation, must be in English.

The above required submission materials are due in the GLI office no later than Monday, January 7, 2019, 5:00pm PT. The application and recommendation form links can be found in this document and on the GLI website by clicking "Apply Now." Your materials listed above will be uploaded to the application. Only completed submissions will be considered for selection. Selection and reduced program fee decisions will be made by GLI.

GLI's program effectiveness comes from its total immersion experience and the commitment participants devote to the full program schedule, to themselves, their colleagues, and their institutions. The residency program requires your participation in full day classroom sessions, as well as activities most evenings. You should reconsider your application if you anticipate needing to remain continually engaged at your workplace during March 25-30, 2019. We estimate 4-6 hours per day of asynchronous coursework during the online week, March 4-9, 2019. You should also plan about 12 hours of asynchronous coursework during the bridge period from March 10-24, 2019. Additionally, we are unable to accommodate families or permit visitors for the duration of the program. We understand this can present a hardship for many and we urge you to consider this carefully before making a submission.

Candidates will be notified of decisions in late January 2019.
